TOPIC

Your message is to be expositional (development of a particular passage) or topical (development of a topic from several passages). You will have a stronger message by communicating a specific topic rather than a broad topic. You may seek assistance in selecting a passage or a topic, but the sermon itself must be your own composition. For your message, you may use a Bible and a lectern that is provided, but you may not use visuals (e.g., posters, charts).

OUTLINE

When composing your sermon your outline should include the topic, an introduction, two to five main points with at least two subpoints for each main point, and a conclusion.

Outline points should be parallel in construction, such as:

- I. Ignoring God's moral standard
- II. Knowing God's moral standard
- III. Obeying God's moral standard

Notate an illustration by writing its descriptive phrase in parentheses under the corresponding main point or subpoint as in the following example:

Rampant cheating in high school
(Illustration: story of classmates sharing answers on chemistry test)

Type the outline on 8 1/2" x 11" white paper (two page limit, including bibliography), single-spaced with double-spacing between major points.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Use five or more reliable references for the bibliography in addition to your Bible. References can include books, Bible study tools, biographies, devotional books, commentaries, Internet sources, magazines, and illustration and speaker quote books.

Note the following sample entries for listing references in the bibliography.

- Book

Pickering, Ernest. Charismatic Confusion. Schaumburg, Ill: Regular Baptist Press, 2006.

- Magazine

Peck, Michael. "Put the Past behind You." The Baptist Bulletin (June 2007): 18, 30.

- Web Site

Talmadge, Eric. "A Running Path to Enlightenment." June 2007.

TIME LIMIT

Your message is to be four to five minutes long. The timekeeper will stand at the end of four minutes as a one minute warning and will stand again at the end of five minutes to signify the end of your speaking time.

PRESENTATION

You may use a copy of your outline when speaking, but points will be deducted for dependence on the outline. You will find it helpful in your preparation to videotape your presentation so you can see and hear areas that need improvement (e.g., posture, gestures, vocal inflection).

INTERVIEW QUESTION

In addition to your prepared message, the judges may ask you to respond to an interview question. You will have one minute to respond to the question. The timekeeper will stand at the end of one minute, signifying that your speaking time has ended.

CHURCH MINISTRY

Presenting your speech in your local church is encouraged, but not required.

CRITERIA

You will be judged in the following areas:

- Theme—significant, original, taken from Scripture, not too broad or general, well stated and developed
- Biblical Content—original message, Biblically accurate, shows investigation and knowledge, supporting material (Plagiarism, close paraphrasing, or substantial borrowing of contents or ideas and representing them as your own work will result in disqualification.)

Not Required!
